The Situation is a Puzzle and Making Interesting Test All Old Timers Are at Sea

The situation as it stands is a verifiable puzzle, especially to the man who has been in the game long enough to call himself a real cill man and is rapidly getting worse in respect to the real reason for the cut in price and above all, the coil purchasing concerns are just as much afraid that some of the oil will get away as they ever were in the history of the game.

The chances are that if it were to be over again there would be no cut in price, as this same rut has led to a treasendous selling campaign on the part of refiners who have heard the threat of another cut to $1.25 a barrel and are not proposing to get caught again. The result is the Texas company, an honored member of the Big Five, is now offering a premium for 3s gravity oil in Oklahoma and in the Lyons pool in particular, where the independents have a line and have advanced the price.

All the threats and infinidations and misrepresentations of the Mexican situation are not having the effect desired by the purchasing concerns, but on the contrary, are making some life-long enemies for the pipelines and with the result that the independent refiner is benefited.
